What's New In Cubicle Tools?

You can use an Object Handler to call a method on a generic or a class object. With Cubicle Tools, you can invoke an Object Handler from an Excel worksheet. Installation: To install the tool, choose the start menu, select Accessories and then Add-ins. Click on the Archive icon to download and install the file. Notes: The function CubeHelper.invokeObjectHandler can be replaced for reading script properties. For example, you can use this code to read a property from the current cell: This method is given by CubeHelper, a user-defined object. If you use your own class or method, check that you clearly distinguish between the method/function that is named, and the user-defined object that is called "CubeHelper". References: About Object Handlers: About Invoke function: Examples of using Cubicle Tools: Last week, University of Minnesota student Elle Monnier was jailed for a semester for refusing to pay a fine levied by campus security for what the school termed "sexual misconduct." Monnier's crime? Disagreeing with the school's definition of sexual misconduct, which requires a date, sex, or a sexual relationship. Her own attorney described her actions as "the most expression of free speech and freedom of association in 35 years of being a constitutional scholar." After she was arrested, Monnier tweeted, "Don't be fooled. I did not force myself on an unconscious, sleeping man. I did not 'sexually assault' him. I did not 'rape.' I did not do anything wrong." Her tweet was retweeted almost 600 times. Though Monnier was charged with misdemeanor assault, a charge which carries with it a possible sentence of up to 90 days in jail, since her tweets were directed at the university, which she believed was punishing her for exercising her First Amendment rights of free speech, she was given a one-year jail sentence. One Twitter user asked, "Is there a sex-offender registry? Do they check that list before jailing someone?" Indeed, it appears that the school is indeed on the sex-offender registry list. As the Associated Press noted, "[A] spokeswoman for the school, Laurie Good
