This invention relates to novel compounds and to processes for their preparation. More particularly, it is concerned with certain 3-alkylpyridines having the general formula ##STR3## wherein R represents an alkyl group of 1 to 4 carbon atoms. In U.S. Pat. No. 3,985,933 it has already been suggested that certain 3-alkylpyridines having the general formula ##STR4## wherein R represents a lower alkyl radical, exhibit the properties characteristic of certain non-linear optical active materials. It has also been recognized therein that these compounds have absorption and emission characteristics of interest in non-linear optics. In the past, a great number of synthetically produced compounds have been found to be useful as non-linear optical active materials. Such compounds usually exhibit the aforesaid characteristics of absorbing light and of emitting light which vary as the light is absorbed. By "light" is meant electromagnetic radiation of a wavelength in the visible region of the spectrum, of the infrared region, or of the ultraviolet region of the spectrum. By "non-linear optics" is meant the field of optics which employs electromagnetic radiation of wavelengths greater than that of the light emitted by a light source due to induced dipole moment or other non-linear activity (i.e., non-linear optical activity). Light sources which emit high intensity, coherent, laser radiation in the visible or infrared region of the spectrum are of particular interest for non-linear optics. However, a number of organic molecules

What's new in Elden Ring:

Fri, 26 Oct 2008 10:13:35 +0000All That's Wrong with This Generation of Video Games>The idea of the Videogame is simple. Provide a system of interconnected game play involving a set of characters where the players compete against each other to solve a scenario given to them in the game. But, over the years this idea has been bungled. First of all as people expanded their ambitions beyond just playing the game, the gamers concept expanded. This led to the term "Gamer". Many games adopted gamer and gamer culture like moves and shirts. This lead to the term "Over Grouch" or "Weak will game" being used to describe the uncaring and unsympathetic gamers.

This became an issue for game companies because many gamers were the model by which an entire group was judged. This was at the same time the game companies were tying their brands to the gamer culture. Well, problems ensued. Many gamers of a certain "pop" of the culture started to get angry at game companies that decided to cater to their tastes. Most cases there has been a slew of think pieces written about how games are the new MTV. In the past this would have been written off as a harmless brattish kind of thing, even in the past many management magazines would have "Let them eat cake" attitude towards this kind of criticism. But, times have changed. Today, certain magazines have written articles on how the mainstream game company will be the replacement for the Catholic Church in 10 or 20 years. There have been other cases where companies have actually made apologies for a bad game by claiming they "were not aware of the current community".

Over the years certain video game executives have grew tired of the vitriol of the press, marketing managers at one point were actually going to curtail marketing of titles that didn't sell well. And, increasingly the game company also just saw the gamers as a means of making money. Some companies, like Electronic Arts, even had talks about charging a monthly fee to the gamer. All this came to a head with the megaurav of the mid 90's,
